Omaha Rapid Response

1. Are you interested in going on an immediate disaster relief team, an ongoing humanitarian aid team, or both?

2. Are you interested in going to a certain country that we are presently working in? Are you interested in serving on an international, national, or local team?

3. Do you understand that you are responsible for raising your own support, for the short-term team you are a part of?

4. What are your giftings, talents, and professional training?

5. Are you prepared to raise a team of 12 people to pray for you while you are away?

6. Are you willing to be loyal and cooperative in all situations to your team leader?

7. Is there anyone currently involved in Omaha Rapid Response that you know? What is their name and the nature of your relationship; i.e., friend, relative, spouse, etc.?

8. Please pass on the character reference form to either your pastor, church leader, employer, manager, or someone else not related to you but in authority over you.

Being part of a Rapid Response team is very demanding, both physically and psychologically. You need to commit to attend all the team training sessions and any other training that the team leader may deem necessary. Depending on the type of trip you commit to go on, the training will differ. To effectively minister in immediate disaster situations, a higher level of preparation is required than the training needed for humanitarian aid situations. The training you need will depend upon what your team leader requires and your previous training and experience level.

If you do not get a strong character reference, if during the interview and training phases we feel that you are unsuitable, either physically or psychologically, to be on a specific team, or if you are unable to raise the funds needed, we reserve the right to ask you to leave the team.

Please sign below if you are prepared to commit to the above requirements.
